

International Electrotechnical Commission

IEC's successful conformity assessment schemes build trust through the peer assessment process and many of their participating certification bodies and testing laboratories are assessed both by accreditation bodies and by their peers. Therefore the IEC works closely with the international accreditation network in order to reduce costs for all stakeholders in conformity assessment. Close cooperation relieves any duplication burden on business whilst enhancing the assessment process overall.

Don Gray, Vice President